4 INWOOD PW'S LOOK TO FUTURE

Friends Since Schooldays Relate Experiences At Card Game

Four branch servicemen recently liberated from German prisoner of war camps discussed their experiences and future plans yesterday afternoon at an informal card game at the home of Private First Class Frank F. Santora, 26 Church street, Inwood. The men, all neighborhood friends since schooldays agreed there was no place in Africa or Europe to compare with their home town.

Captured In Sicily

Private Santoria, a prisoner for 20 months, was captured in the invasion of Sicily when his infantry squadron was trapped by attacking Germans. He received shrapnel wounds and was treated at various field hospitals in Sicily and Italy. He arrived at Stalag 11 B in September, 1943, and during his internment worked as a farmer, laborer, lumberjack and cook. Private Santora said he saw many acts of cruelty towards American soldiers and after his liberation visited hospitals where Yanks suffering from malnutrition were recuperating. Santora is on a 71-day furlough, to be followed by a two weeks' rest at Lage Placid.

Ersatz soup was the main diet for both airmen and infantrymen, according to Staff Sergeant Nicholas Orlando of Bayview avenue, an Eighth air force ball turret gunner.

"The weekly Red Cross packages stretched over the seven days kept us going," he said. Sergeant Orlando was captured on his 16th mission with a B-17 bomber squadron when antiaircraft artillery knocked out three engines of his plane. Landing near Berlin, the crew was captured by German ack-ack troops. Sergeant Orlando holds the Air Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters and a Bronze Battle Star. He will be home for 60 days and on July 29 will take Miss Kay Jareb of Hewlett as his bride. They will lhoneymoon at Atlantic City.

Completed 27 Missions

Another airman, Sergeant Michael Deironimi of Wanser avenue, completed 27 missions as a ball gunner on a B-24 Liberator before being captured by pro-Nazi Yugoslavs. Three engines were destroyed and a wing was shot off his ship which had made bombing raids on the Ploesti oil wells, Vienna aircraft plants and Wiener Neustadt. The young 15th air force gunner holds an Air Medal with three Oak Leaf Clusters, a Presidential Citation, and three battle stars. He will vacation in Boston, Mass., on his 60-day furlough and will later go to Atlantic City for reassignment.

A winner of the Purple Heart and Combat Infantryman's Badge is Private Michael Ferraro of Church street, Inwood, who is opposed to compulsory military training after the war. Agreeing with Ferraro on the issue are Private Santora and Sergeant Deironimi. However, Sergeant Orlando believes such training would insure peace. Private Ferraro was captured and wounded at Anzio, Italy, and was a prisoner for 14 months. Lake Placid will be his destination after a 69-day furlough.

Former German Prisoners Meet In Inwood

Child Training

—By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.—

Helping the Lonely Child

IN MANY types of mental illness the patient is shut-in and noncommunicative. Often the history of his life is one of loneliness, even when in the midst of many persons. He may never have mixed well with others at any age. Besides, there are thousands of youths and adults who will never break mentally or emotionally but yet are very lonely, miserable persons. To this degree they don't enjoy perfect mental health.

Just the fears and worries this person who doesn't win friends may have over his loneliness, and the disturbing emotions he may encounter when he must work and mingle with other persons, can pile up to the degree that he actually can become mentally ill.

Let no timid, lonely person, however, suppose he is on the way to become a mental patient. He probably has ample personal resources by which to discipline himself so as to win friends and become comfortable and agreeable with other people. The trained counselor anl sympathetic friend also may help him to help himself.

Too, his reading such books as, "Managing One's Self," by James G. Gilkey, or "Return to Religion," by Henry Link, might help him some. A selected list of such books may be had for postage.

Doctor's Advice

JUST a few suggestion to the timid, lonely soul: Make yourself go often where others are. Don't suppose you must talk much in a social group. Just listen attentively. This is the safest and easiest way to win approval, especially with others who like to talk. You don't have to worry then about the mistakes you might make or of the choice of subject. Besides, when you get lost in what others say your fears and worries about yourself subside. You feel more comfortable then and act more comfortably. You are more attractive.

Learn some social skills in which you can participate with others enjoyably. When alone, never allow yourself to dwell on the social mistakes you suppose you made. Instead, name over to yourself some of your successes, however small. Never pity yourself. Lose yourself in a cause outside yourself. Make some personal sacrifice for a church, welfare service or some chill or adult in need.

Playmates Needed

BEGIN when your child begins to toddle to expose him to other children of his age. Spare no reasonable effort or sacrifice to this end. Patiently guide him and don't falter should he not make rapid progress in being a good playmate. Don't consider him too good to play with other children of the neighborhood. If they seem unfit, attract them to your home and spend time and patience to win them to be better so your child will eventually be the one to gain.

No matter how old the child is who does not seek companionship of his own age, search for ways to set the stage so he will. This may call for all the wisdom, skill and resources at your command. Teachers, too, should be concerned about the over-quiet, shy and shut-in child, whom they are prone to neglect because he causes them no trouble. Let us all remember that loneliness at any age tends to predispose loneliness at a later age.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. My husband and I who have diligently read many books on rearing children, nearly all of which say, 'No spanking,' tried to follow this advice but are now convinced that we were wrong as our five-year-old boy is getting out of hand. Now what?

A. If you are convinced you should spank that lad now, I advise you to limit spanking to one or two situations concerning which you wish to teach him the meaning of NO, making sure he never escapes instant sound spanking when he repeats the forbidden act. As soon as he will go sit in a chair when commanded to do so, without being taken there bodily, limit spanking still further so as to use it, if necessary at all, only when he leaves the chair before the time is up, after having been assigned to sit there for a definite period, say 30 minutes.

Hollywood

—By JIMMIE FIDLER—

HOLLYWOOD, June 23—Photoplay magazine has purchased rights to Frank Sinatra's speeches against racial intolerance (made before high school audiences) and will print them in its next four issues . . . Dennis Morgan's three-month concert tour will be made despite studio protests that threatened feud proportions . . . Ha! When ex-star Ramon Novarro sought permission to take friends through his old studio, MGM, the reception clerk asked if he knew anyone on the lot. Sic transit gloria mund—in Hollywood!

Despite denials, Ann Richards and Director William Castle will wed soon . . . Lynn Bari, touted for stardom on the strength of her acting in "Captain Eddie," has retired to await Doc Stork . . . Hmmm, Bing Crosby took Eastern race-track bookies to the cleaners on his recent junket . . . Which reminds me that stock in the High Divide gold mine, owned largely by movie biggies, is skyrocketing so fast it's making them forget Santa Anita.

Ginger Rogers demanded, and got, a 30-day postponement of her next picture when hubby Jack Briggs arrived unexpectedly in San Francisco for a 30-day furlough from the marine corps . . . Add best bets; Michiline Cheirel, John Loder's ex-missus, here from France and getting bids from RKO and Warner Brothers . . . Rita Hayworth and Orson Welles have bought a hideaway near Carmel.

Cary Grant reported for work in "Night and Day" (his first stint in months) 30 pounds underweight . . . Aside to femme employees: I don't want to cause trouble, but you might tell your boss that Jack Warner gifted Joan Leslie with an emerald bracelet and matching earrings on the fifth anniversary of her WB job.

PREVIEW NIGHTS: Pic of the week: United Artists's "Story of G. I. Joe" (Burgess Meredith-Robert Mitchum-Freddie Steele). As starkly real and human as Ernie Pyle's book . . . RECOMMENDED: Warner Brothers' "Conflict" (Humphrey Bogart-Alexis Smith). Bogart returns to a life of crime . . . 20th Century-Fox's "Junior Miss" (Peggy Ann Garner-Allyn Joslyn). A comedy breeze, refreshing enough to offset summer heat waves . . . GOOD: Universal's "Jungle Captive." Top-notch for shudder-and-shriek fans . . . Universal's "The Woman in Green" (Basil Rathbone-Nigel Bruce) . . . BEST PERFORMANCE: Freddie Steele in "Story of G. I. Joe." An ex-boxing champ, turned actor, gives his first role a knockout punch.

PAYS FINE OF $25 ON TRAFFIC CHARGES

Located after being sought by the police since December 1941, when he pleaded not guilty to charges of driving without a license and to speeding, Joseph Cervone, 26, a time keeper's helper in a shipyard and residing at 337 East 114th street, Manhattan, had today pleaded guilty to the two charges and paid fines totalin $25.

State Trooper J. L. Duffy charged that, on August 16, 1941, at Westbury, Corvone was driving an auto on Northern State parkway without a license and that he was traveling at 57 miles per hour.

District Court Judge George S. Johnson, before whom Cervone was arraigned, imposed a sentence of $15 or three days for the first charge and $10 or two days for the second. The sentences will run concurrently.

FATHER'S CHARGE JAILS HIS SON

Carmine Salerno Starts Two Sentences Of 6 Months Each

Carmine Salerno, 28, a laborer of 7224 Fourth avenue, Brooklyn, today had begun two concurrent sentences of six months each in the county jail after pleading guilty to a charge of disorderly conduct made against him by his father, Joseph Salerno, a bar and grill owner of 16 Merrick road, Baldwin, and a charge of third degree assault made by Patrolman Joseph Weiman of the first precinct.

The elder Salerno charged that on Thursday night Carmine came into the bar and grill, and broke mirrors, chairs and glasses, called his father vile names, and was fighting with parties in the establishment.

Patrolman Weiman charged that the defendant struck him in the left eye with his fist.

Joseph Salerno told District Court Judge George S. Johnson, who imposed the sentence, that his son had earned $40,000 in the past 10 years and did not have a penny of it left.
